CONTROLLING TYPHOID.

The ease with which typhoid can be controlled and its spread checked nowadays is shown in a small but still significant way by the recent outbreak in the Quary Point section. Not many years ago such an outbreak would have caused general alarm owing to the danger of infection for the whole community. A more striking example is shown in the rapid subsidence of the typhoid epidemic in Montreal once the public health authorities began to grapple with it without fear or favor. It is evidence that this disease which once took so heavy an annual toll of the population, can be controlled.

Still more striking evidence is now furnished by the League of Nations, which reports that in fifty-nine cities of the United States, with an aggregate population of 15,000,000, there were only 523 deaths from typhoid fever in 1926. The rate of typhoid mortality in these cities was 2.8 per 100,000.

Cities in the United States are tackling the typhoid problem on scientific lines; the precautions taken against the spread of the disease from Montreal are evidence of that. That typhoid has been reduced to a point where the extermination of the disease is among the prospects of the future is a great measure due to the work of the public health departments. The safeguarding of the water and milk supplies must be left to public servants. Modern health departments, as we know them today, are the creation of the past half century. Fifty years ago, the public did not have to pay for them. Today they call for heavy expenditures. But they pay for themselves many times over.

The decline in typhoid fever furnishes one among many evidences of that fact.

NEW OUTLET FOR COAL.

An experiment in Germany is being watched with keen interest not only by engineers but by economists and labor leaders. Gas generated at coal mines of the Ruhr and supplied at high pressure to homes at a distance of 60 miles, a single, colossal boiler. The reports for all German local gas companies transformed into mere retailers of centrally produced gas—such is the startling undertaking on which a coal utilization company in Essen is about to embark. The Ruhr cannot utilize the enormous quantities of gas which is a by-product in the manufacture of blast-furnace coke. Nothing worries a plant more than waste. Hence this startling national gas plant.

This German project is the first rational plan for the generation of energy at the mine mouth and its distribution over distances as great as this has far reached by electric

THE WORD "LADY" OVERLOOKED.

(Canadian Press, Calgary)

LONDON, November 16.—The word "lady" has been worked to a frazzle in the land. "Woman" is better served in a book.

"I can never get used to hear some people use the word 'woman'," remarked Mr. Justice Horridge in the King's Bench division when a witness was asked by counsel for persistently calling a party in the case to a "woman" instead of a "lady."

"Woman" is a very good word and in these days nearly everybody, it seems to me, added the court.

LEVINSKY WINS DECISION.

Rumors in circulation last year that the death of the late States of Anson Macdonald, a former well known resident of Cape Breton, turn out happily to be incorrect, relatives here having just word from him. He is a native of Bear Bell's Creek and has been abroad for 23 years. He has numerous relatives in Cape Breton who will be glad to have this intimation of his whereabouts. His ranch is situated near Topsham, in the state mentioned. Mr. Macdonald, Victoria Street, is a nephew.
